Rishikesh, a yoga-mad town in Uttarakhand, a state in northern India.

NO. 14 UTTARAKHAND, INDIA

Often called the Land of Gods, India's northern state of Uttarakhand is dotted with ancient temples, hill stations, and snowcapped peaks. It's home to some of Hinduism's holiest cities, one of which, Rishikesh, is considered the yoga capital of the world. And now, in addition to no-fuss accommodations catering to die-hard yogis, there are new upmarket lodgings, including the Taj Rishikesh Resort & Spa, Uttarakhand (tajhotels.com; doubles from $261) and the Roseate Ganges Rishikesh (roseatehotels.com; doubles from $413), both ultra-luxe, nature-filled retreats along the Ganges. Near the Tibetan border, the 10-suite Kumaon (thekumaon.com; doubles from $180) blends tropical modernism with stark Himalayan contours. Book a trek with Village Ways (villageways.com; from $1,707 for 11 nights) and you can meander through terraced valleys and pristine wilderness, bed down in village guesthouses, or camp on a bugyal, an alpine meadow. —R.S.

In ancient times, it was a sacred site dedicated to the god Tyr; its spring drew pilgrims who believed its waters had healing properties. More recently, Tisvildeleje and the surrounding Danish Riviera have attracted urbanites who embrace the area's rustic, unpretentious charms. The town is little more than a main road, lined with intimate restaurants such as the buzzy new

The choicest stays are two reimagined 19th-century properties: the boho Tisvildeleje Strandhotel (strandhotel.dk; doubles from $122) and Helenekilde Badehotel (helenekilde.com; doubles from $213), a grand beach house with Midcentury Modern Danish furnishings and front-row views of the Kattegat Sea. —Gisela Williams
